POETRY.

THE ETERNAL YEARS OF GOD ARE HERE.
But Error, wronged, writhes in pain,
And dies among his worshippers.

Yea, though thou lie upon the dust
When they who helped thee flee in fear,
Die full of hope and manly trust,
Like those who fell in battle here!

Another hand the sword shall wield,
Another hand the standard wave,
Till from the trumpet's mouth is pealed
The blast of triumph o'er thy grave.

Miscellaneous.
Four Chapters of a White Life.
BY FANNY FERN.

CHAPTER I.
"How unfortunate! mamma writes me that she cannot find her emerald bracelet. Now I don't dare tell that I have lost it, as you remember I did, but I must tell you that it is in her house. I'm sure I don't know what happened to it. I'm sure I don't know what happened to it. I'm sure I don't know what happened to it."

CHAPTER II.
"Mary, come here, I want to see you alone a moment, and Mrs. Atley entered her dressing room followed by her maid."

CHAPTER III.
"The leader of the swart fellow, whose square jaw and honest eyes, and whose eyes, expressed a heart of cunning and guile, addressed me in very fair English."

CHAPTER IV.
"Why, Lena, you look like a ghost. An hour checks were red as roses. What is the matter, my little cousin? Lena said nothing, and her face assumed a deadly hue, as she pointed to a single paragraph."

WHOLE NO. 151.

was stationed upon the "Maid of the Mist," about 80 feet above a point beneath the cable, and it was a fine target or not. Mr. Blondin, the famous tight-rope walker, was passing on about 200 feet from the top of the cable, and he was very much surprised to find that the cable was not as tight as he supposed it to be. He was very much surprised to find that the cable was not as tight as he supposed it to be. He was very much surprised to find that the cable was not as tight as he supposed it to be.

After refreshing himself with his friends, Mr. Blondin appeared again at the rope at 5. But this time he was clad in dark habiliments, with a false face, and very much resembled a monster. He had his little harrow and balancing pole before him. He proceeded directly across the river, without once halting until he had gained the other side. He was very much surprised to find that the cable was not as tight as he supposed it to be. He was very much surprised to find that the cable was not as tight as he supposed it to be. He was very much surprised to find that the cable was not as tight as he supposed it to be.

Attacked by a snake.—Mr. James Lippin of this place came into our office on Thursday evening last, bearing an enormous snake in his hand, which he relates to us the following circumstances: He was passing through Mr. Thos. S. McCalley's farm a mile or two from town, and immediately on getting over a fence, a large black moccasin snake, fully five feet long, sprang upon him from the bushes, and wrapped itself around one of his legs, attempting at the same time to strike him with its fangs. Mr. L. kicked it off with a bit of wood he had in his hand and hardly expected another attack; but the vicious rascal again sprang upon him from a distance of some four feet and the second time, tightly coiled itself around his leg. By great exertion he at last succeeded in getting his foot on the monster and at once dispatched him.

THE WHITES AND BLACKS.—The New York Express rebukes, with much spirit and good sense, the eternal squabbling of the politicians about slavery. It asks, are there no other subjects for the attention of the American people besides the black race? It demands to know if the interests of twenty-five millions of white men are always to be sacrificed to the interests of four millions of blacks.

Such a sacrifice would be manifestly unwise and ruinous, but after all it is not the interests of the black laborers, or of the white politicians, that causes this eternal tangle. The real cause of the trouble is the fact that the subject of Slavery, per se, is not of the man in the nation. It is only as it affects a hobby, whereby white men can "ride in place," that he occupies a prominent position in the politics of the country. The question is not of whites to be sacrificed to millions of blacks, but of the interests of twenty-five millions of whites to be sacrificed to the interests of four millions of blacks. Are the interests of the twenty-five millions to be sacrificed to the interests of the four millions? This is the question. It is the question of the interests of the nation as a whole, and it is the question of the interests of the nation as a whole.

NEWSMEN.—Consider how universal are newspapers in America. They penetrate every corner and corner of society. No other class of power has such a sphere. The pulpit, the court, the lecture, compared with the newspaper, touch society, in but few instances. The newspaper in America is universal. It reaches within and without, from surface to core; it travels everywhere, by classes, by a wholly or nearly the only reading of more than half our population. Its service to good morals and to intelligence among the people is incalculable. All the libraries of Europe are not of as much service to the nations of Europe as such newspapers are to this American nation. Its power is growing. Who would have dreamed of such a growth and power as has been developed? But the next twenty years will witness a greater. The editor is still the schoolmaster. The best talent will find his highest sphere in the editorial chair. He is ready to chair is more in demand than the banch or the platform. No brain can act upon so many as that of the daily paper. Ink boots like blood in the veins of the nation.—(Judge.)

The Coosa River Survey.
We learn from a friend, that Capt. Rhodes of Rome, with a party of gentlemen have made a survey of that river, and the Coosa river between the Ten Islands, and the railroad bridge in this county, with the most satisfactory results.

In the present stage of the river they report a depth of ten feet of water, three fourths of the way, while the remaining fourth will average three feet in depth. They report a depth of 18 inches on the worst shoal. This shoal is composed principally of round boulders, which may be removed at a comparatively trifling cost.

It is proposed to put a steamer on the river in the course of the coming twelve months, which will ply between the Ten Islands and the Bridge in the winter season, and will perhaps, run as low as the Tallapoosa, during the summer. It is hoped to see it in operation, at an early day.—(Huntsville Independent.)

reached the trucks, unhooked his saddle in the wind. On a white flag we saw a terrible insignia of the freebooter, the death's head and crossbones, painted in diabolical black.

We made all the sail we could, but escape was impossible. A gun from the pirate, and a ball whistled around us, came quickly along like a panther, and laid down upon the rope. He did not pause again until he had gained his carriage. The heat was very oppressive, the thermometer standing at 75 degrees in the shade. The boat was wonderful shape, and was perfectly formed backward, and in the short space of 15 minutes, including all stops.

The pulpit, the court, the lecture, compared with the newspaper, touch society, in but few instances. The newspaper in America is universal. It reaches within and without, from surface to core; it travels everywhere, by classes, by a wholly or nearly the only reading of more than half our population. Its service to good morals and to intelligence among the people is incalculable. All the libraries of Europe are not of as much service to the nations of Europe as such newspapers are to this American nation. Its power is growing. Who would have dreamed of such a growth and power as has been developed? But the next twenty years will witness a greater. The editor is still the schoolmaster. The Coosa River Survey.
We learn from a friend, that Capt. Rhodes of Rome, with a party of gentlemen have made a survey of that river, and the Coosa river between the Ten Islands, and the railroad bridge in this county, with the most satisfactory results.

In the present stage of the river they report a depth of ten feet of water, three fourths of the way, while the remaining fourth will average three feet in depth. They report a depth of 18 inches on the worst shoal. This shoal is composed principally of round boulders, which may be removed at a comparatively trifling cost.

It is proposed to put a steamer on the river in the course of the coming twelve months, which will ply between the Ten Islands and the Bridge in the winter season, and will perhaps, run as low as the Tallapoosa, during the summer. It is hoped to see it in operation, at an early day.—(Huntsville Independent.)

reached the trucks, unhooked his saddle in the wind. On a white flag we saw a terrible insignia of the freebooter, the death's head and crossbones, painted in diabolical black.

We made all the sail we could, but escape was impossible. A gun from the pirate, and a ball whistled around us, came quickly along like a panther, and laid down upon the rope. He did not pause again until he had gained his carriage. The heat was very oppressive, the thermometer standing at 75 degrees in the shade. The boat was wonderful shape, and was perfectly formed backward, and in the short space of 15 minutes, including all stops.

After refreshing himself with his friends, Mr. Blondin appeared again at the rope at 5. But this time he was clad in dark habiliments, with a false face, and very much resembled a monster. He had his little harrow and balancing pole before him. He proceeded directly across the river, without once halting until he had gained the other side. He was very much surprised to find that the cable was not as tight as he supposed it to be. He was very much surprised to find that the cable was not as tight as he supposed it to be. Attacked by a snake.—Mr. James Lippin of this place came into our office on Thursday evening last, bearing an enormous snake in his hand, which he relates to us the following circumstances: He was passing through Mr. Thos. S. McCalley's farm a mile or two from town, and immediately on getting over a fence, a large black moccasin snake, fully five feet long, sprang upon him from the bushes, and wrapped itself around one of his legs, attempting at the same time to strike him with its fangs. Mr. L. kicked it off with a bit of wood he had in his hand and hardly expected another attack; but the vicious rascal again sprang upon him from a distance of some four feet and the second time, tightly coiled itself around his leg. By great exertion he at last succeeded in getting his foot on the monster and at once dispatched him.

Attacks from snakes are very rare in this section of the country and we are at a loss to know the cause of his snake's behavior. It is possible that it may have been that Mr. L. jumped upon him in crossing to some degree of trepidation during the race. Happily he escaped unhurt.—(Huntsville Independent.)

THE WHITES AND BLACKS.—The New York Express rebukes, with much spirit and good sense, the eternal squabbling of the politicians about slavery. It asks, are there no other subjects for the attention of the American people besides the black race? It demands to know if the interests of twenty-five millions of white men are always to be sacrificed to the interests of four millions of blacks.

Such a sacrifice would be manifestly unwise and ruinous, but after all it is not the interests of the black laborers, or of the white politicians, that causes this eternal tangle. The real cause of the trouble is the fact that the subject of Slavery, per se, is not of the man in the nation. It is only as it affects a hobby, whereby white men can "ride in place," that he occupies a prominent position in the politics of the country. The question is not of whites to be sacrificed to millions of blacks, but of the interests of twenty-five millions of whites to be sacrificed to the interests of four millions of blacks. Are the interests of the twenty-five millions to be sacrificed to the interests of the four millions? This is the question. It is the question of the interests of the nation as a whole, and it is the question of the interests of the nation as a whole.

NEWSMEN.—Consider how universal are newspapers in America. They penetrate every corner and corner of society. No other class of power has such a sphere. On the Paris Bourse Napoleon's death sent up funds 1/2.

Consols were quoted at 99 1/2

The London Times says that France spent fifty million pounds sterling, a sacred fifty thousand men, only give Milan a Piedmontese instead an Austrian master; and that she there establishes the Pope in the papal dignity, even beyond his jurisdiction. It concludes with the prediction that Napoleon's game must be a losing one.

The News says that Italy has been restored in her hopes, by this peace. However, it adds, will call Napoleon to a rict account for having entered the war with false pretences; and with having signed a mock and selfish peace, which leaves Austria impreguably for-fied in the heart of Northern Italy, while the central portion is committed to the patronage of the Pope.

The Morning Post says that the pope is deprived of the substance, but retains the shadow of his supremacy.

It was rumored in Berlin that the Emperor of Russia would soon arrive to attend a family conference touching the disposal of the Prussian crown
 after the abdication of the King.

The announcement of peace was read in both Houses of Parliament, and was received with loud and prolonged cheers.

LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE EUROPEAN.

COTTON ADVANCE—LARGE
S.ALES.

BANK RATES REDUCED.

Boston, July 27.

The steamship Europa has arrived with Liverpool dates to the 16th inst.

The sales of cotton for the week previous to her departure amounted to 107,000 bales, at an advance of 1 to 1d.
 Orleans terms ordinaire 112.

Consols 94 1/8.

The Bank of England had reduced its rate of interest 2 1/2 per cent.

Additional by the Europa.

State of Trade.—Manchester advices were favorable. All qualities of goods were advancing. Yarns had advanced 3d, but the high prices checked business.

At Liverpool breadstuffs were declining, and there was but little enquiry. Provisions were very dull, and Pork reported heavy and declining.

The news of peace was fully confirmed, but no particulars had transpired beyond the fact that the Princes of Tuscany and Modena had returned to their States.

The result of the treaty is generally mistrusted in England.

The Emperor Napoleon was on his way to France.

The Cantabrian ministry had resigned, and Count Aresé had been charged to form a new cabinet.

Arrival of the Moses Taylor.

New York, July 27.—The steamship Moses Taylor, from Aspinwall, has arrived. She brings late news from California, mails and passengers, and $2,100,000 in treasure.

A large number of golden ingots had recently been found on the Indian; and several thousand dollars worth of gold dust.

A WHITE EGG-THIEF YOLKED—Marysville exchange tells the story of a scraggy looking fellow who was seen robbing a hen roost, in Marysville.
The owner ran after him, and the thief
"got up and got." The owner kept after him crying "ketch him, ketch him!" at the top of his voice. A company of policemen, hearing the cry, came to the scene, and seeing the fugitive, made for him at railroad speed. He finally resisted their efforts, and the policemen, who rushed directly through them, his pursuers close to his heels. He was seen to jump over a fence, and on the other side of the water works is a heavy deposit of dirt and sediment into which the fugitive jumped bolting. He was seen to crawl with the view of wading through and getting to the brush. No sooner had he struck it however, than he sank up to his neck in the mud, and he was unable to extricate himself. He was seen to struggle in this predicament for some time —Absalom when Jack was a helpless child, and he was soon arrested and taken to the Station House. He vehemently declared and swore that he never stole an egg in his life—he was found of eggs no how, and never "em—they didn't agree with his story!" An officer while searching his pocket hit his hand in the fellow's pocket and he was seen to drop the egg speedily drew it forth dripping—it was filled with broken eggs!

THE WEDDING OF THE SEASON—
New York correspondent of the Bos-

Of all the weddings that New York has seen this century, the one to take off on the 14th of July excites the greatest interest. The bridegroom, Spanish gentleman of the ripe age of sixty years, small and light of figure but heavy in gold. His wealth is to be fabulous. The bride is a young damsel, poor in purse, but of fine personal attractions. She is young, of queenly form, and of a justly elegant countenance. Her attention of all who pass her by attracts them. The stories told of the pretensions, dresses, and bridal present are astounding. Her bridal veil cost ten thousand dollars. The bride herself one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Tiffany is making the bridal dress. None of your hot house plants adorn the brow of the young lady. But the wreath is of gold, and studded with jewelry of great value. said bridegroom is a great Catholic, and call in the aid of all that is good in his church to add to the magnificence of the wedding.

This image displays a highly textured, black-and-white surface, likely a microscopic view of a material or a high-contrast scan of a physical object. The texture is characterized by a dense, repeating pattern of small, dark, irregular shapes (possibly pores, grains, or fibers) set against a lighter, grainy background. The overall appearance is reminiscent of a woven fabric, a porous material, or a complex crystalline structure. The image is oriented vertically and shows a slight vertical gradient in brightness, with the top appearing slightly darker than the bottom.
